Details:

What: The Wreck of The Broken Landscape, A Radio Tragedy in Three Acts

When: Friday, July 18, 2008, Midnight - 3:00 a.m.

Where: KBOO-FM, 90.7 FM, listen live on the web at www.kboo.org

Who: Starring Baron Landscape and the Broken Bit-Part Players
Produced by Splice Finders
Presented by KBOO-FM and The Outside World

Always imitative and never pre-empted enough, Baron Landscape's Broken Hours ended its ten-year run on KBOO in 1993. The airwaves have rebounded well from those dark times, and certainly no one expected the return of Baron Landscape, the eclectic and disturbed progammer whose mastery of the banal instilled skepticism throughout Portland's radio audience. However, on July 18, KBOO will inexplicably permit Baron Landscape to air The Wreck of The Broken Landscape (A Radio Tragedy in Three Acts) in its stead. With more music and apologies than Leaving Las Vegas and Gimme Shelter combined, this long-threatened production revisits the classic Broken Hours themes of alienation, futility and travel, imagining Joseph Conrad in a Naomi Klein world, as sung by Mark Eitzel. That the Baron's return to disastrous form coincides with KBOO's 40th anniversary is the stuff of which viral internet rumors are made.
